

Fifteen-year-old Maya Hooks is an actor, award-winning film director and award-winning screenwriter from the southside of Chicago Illinois. Maya has worked at the Victory Gardens and Artistic Home Theaters, The Beverly Arts Center, Theater 47, and the BAM Theaters. Maya's latest Project Keep It Too Yourself won her Best Director in the nationally selected Black Girls Film Camp Competition. Her first short film Black Girls Vs Ambiguous was written, produced and starring Maya is currently making its way through the film festival circuit. Maya has also completed six College credit hours in the film program at the Bronx Community College while being in the 8th grade. She and is working extremely hard balancing acting classes and auditions.