
Brea Weston

Brea Weston is an actor and theater artist based in Chicago. She is ecstatic to be making her way back to the stage as Kai Phillips in Other Paths to God. Brea earned her BA in Theater from Columbia College Chicago, where she also minored in Stage Combat. Her work spans theater, independent film, short films, and commercial work, including an appearance on Chicago P.D. She has also continued her training through dialect studies at Actors Studio Chicago. For Brea, acting is an opportunity to explore the parts of ourselves that are often left unspoken—to step into another person’s story and, in doing so, discover something new about our own. She is continually inspired by the vulnerability, connection, and imagination that live within live theater. She is deeply grateful to the cast and creative team of Other Paths to God for creating a space where stories can be shared, felt, and experienced together.
